

EU Referendum 2016 Result - Special Pullout

What Do We Think?

After many people were shocked by the outcome of a victory for the Vote Leave campaign, our Year 5 pupils wanted to have their say on both the result and the implications for the UK.

Ami

At our school referendum at St. Pierre, our poll was 52% to stay and 48% to leave. But, the real poll was the same numbers, but the other way round! The Prime Minister, David Cameron, has resigned from his job, [which is the fancy way of saying he quit], and nearly all the Year Fives started singing. We all hope this vote has made us stronger! Bigger is not always better.

I would have preferred the REMAIN group to win the referendum as I think that we could have made a difference to Europe. I think that David Cameron has resigned because nobody was listening to him!

Carrissa

All along, I wanted to leave. As children we were not allowed to vote, but at Saint Pierre we did a mini-EU referendum. It was a reverse of the real result of 52% for REMAIN and 48% for LEAVE.

As you may all know, David Cameron has resigned as he wanted to stay in the EU. I hope that this vote will help bring Britain together as a team. Who do you want to be the next Prime Minister? No pressure!

Toni

It was an extraordinary day for everyone in the UK, with both us leaving the EU and David Cameron resigning. Civilisation as we now it could come to an end. Can this stunning result be changed by the leaders of the country? Could Great Britain just be Britain?

Pia

Votes are always hard decisions, just like the EU vote. I think that the UK should have stayed in the EU. The vote was the other way around to our school as we had 52 percent to REMAIN and 48 percent to LEAVE. I think our livelihoods are in danger as David Cameron has decided to resign. I feel a bit scared and not very safe. How do you feel?

Harvey

I was not surprised that as a country we voted to leave the EU, but I am surprised that the result was different to our referendum at Saint Pierre School! It seems to me that all of the mums voted to stay and that all of the dads voted to leave. I am happy that David Cameron resigned.
